PRISONERS UP FOR SENTENCE

Court Hears Pleas for Leniency.
Bergendohl, Magazine Solicitor,
Free on Parole. Not Held for Washington Authorities.

Jail sentences of one month each were imposed in Adams County Court this afternoon upon Amos Wilkerson, aged 22, and William Glass, aged 18, who pleaded guilty to several larcenies in and about Biglerville. The sentences will run concurrent.

In behalf of Wilkerson, J. Donald Swope, Esq. stated that the young man was believed to be under the influence of some other person in committing the crimes. Mr. Swope presented a petition signed by a number of Biglerville citizens asking leniency. A similar petition for Glass was presented by Edward A. Weaver, Esq.

District Attorney Wible called attention to the fact that neither petition asked either parole or suspension of sentence. This, he said, he regarded as significant, as indicating the sentiment of the community; and the Court stated that he felt the force of this argument. Both defendants had been in jail since February 4.

Among the places at which they appeared were the farm of Martin Boyer, the Reading Railroad station, and the restaurant of R. C. Walter in Biglerville, and the Court pointed out the evident inclination to thieving which was more apparent than if only one offense had been committed. Sentence was imposed, the Court stated, not only as a warning to others but as a lesson to themselves.

The Court showed little sympathy with the effort to inflict punishment upon M. E. Bergendohl, the magazine solicitor, who pleaded guilty to three charges of false pretense. The young man is but eighteen years of age, innocent in appearance, and nothing was produced to show that he had ever been in trouble before this time.

Edward A. Weaver, Esq., presented his case and stated that the total amount involved in his alleged illegal practices here was $2.60 and that it was neither right or fair to take into account statements about alleged misconduct elsewhere. When the Court indicated clemency District Attorney Wible produced a detainer sent from the District of Columbia where Bergendohl was wanted on a similar charge.

The Court not only placed the boy on parole but refused to honor the detainer and gave him his freedom, placing the costs on the county. He had been in jail since February 16 and the Court, in showing leniency, stated that he hoped the term he had spent in the county jail had taught him that honesty was the best policy and the only proper way to conduct one's life.

Claude Groft was given a Penitentiary sentence of not less than one year or more than three years on the charge of the larceny of a horse, buggy, and harness from his step-father. The Court pointed out that he was placed on parole in January 1914 and that he regarded the prisoner as a dangerous man. George Simpson, associated with him in the crime, was given six months in the county jail.

Joseph McDannell, of Hamiltonban township, guilty of selling liquor without a license, was given thirty days with instructions to "be good" upon his release from jail.

George Craig, found guilty of malicious mischief in breaking in a door at the home of Peter Shultz, gave intoxication as the reason for his offense. Craig had been in jail since March 10, he has a wife and three children with no visible means of support. The defendant was placed under parole and then discharged upon arranging for the costs.

Thomas Jackson, 53 years old, and Frank Morton, 59 years, two tramps, said they would never return to this county after getting out of jail. Both claimed they had been "on the road" only a few weeks. They have been in jail for 19 days and were given 20 days more.

David Wolf, of Berwick township, who stole several chickens valued at $7.00 or $8.00, was next called for sentence. In extenuation of the offense it was stated that the young man, prior to an illness with typhoid fever, had never shown any disposition to do anything out of the way. His mother's ill health was urged for a parole, together with a petition from various well known neighbors; while the father made a personal plea

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS HERE

Rear Admiral of the United States Navy Spends Day on Gettysburg Battlefield. Wallace Nutting, Famous Artist, also here.

Visitors of distinction toured the battlefield to-day, several parties of national prominence being among the guests at the various hotels.

Rear Admiral J. D. Adams, Captain A. C. Hodgson and Mrs. Hodgson made up one automobile party which came here from Washington and spent the morning and afternoon on the battlefield, intending to return home before Sunday. They were registered at Hotel Gettysburg.

Wallace Nutting, the widely known and very popular artist, was a Gettysburg visitor to-day. He was accompanied by Mrs. Nutting and they, too, were traveling by motor. Mr. and Mrs. Nutting reside at Framingham, Massachusetts, and they are touring for several weeks in this section of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wellington and Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Marsh, prominent Baltimore residents, were among the other tourists here to-day.

E. J. Crabb, of London, England, came here to-day as the guest of H. B. Keiper and L. B. Keiper, well known Lancaster business men who are more or less frequent visitors to the field. They were registered at the Eagle.

Automobiles from no less than seventeen different states have been in Gettysburg with tourists during the week and indications are that this summer will far surpass all others in the number who will use this means to visit the battlefield.

The Court showed little sympathy with the effort to inflict punishment upon M. E. Bergendohl, the magazine solicitor, who pleaded guilty to three charges of false pretense. The young man is but eighteen years of age, innocent in appearance, and nothing was produced to show that he had ever been in trouble before this time.

CHILDREN ENJOY TREASURE HUNT

Scores of Gettysburg Girls and Boys Follow Indian Signs and Cipher Signals to Find Hidden Prizes. Day in the Woods.

In their first big field day all the Camp Fire Girls and Boy Scouts of Gettysburg started out over nearby roads early this afternoon for a treasure hunt to close this evening near McAllister's Dam with a cooked picnic supper, which the youngsters will prepare for themselves. Well on to one hundred happy girls and boys are out on the event.

They started from the Square shortly after noon. Six trails had been prepared through the country from the Baltimore Pike, Rock Creek, Wolf Hill and the York Pike. Indian signs, fifty to one hundred feet apart, were marked with white paint and here and there on the trail cipher letters were hidden. These had to be discovered and used in order to find the next objective point. For two or three miles these trails zigzagged their ways over fields and streams. At the end of each was a letter with the prize number entitling the finder to the coveted treasure.

After the hunt a competition is to be held along Rock Creek at a point about two hundred feet below McAllister's Dam. Each one of the party will try their skill with creamed beef, French fried potatoes, bacon and eggs, poached eggs, and pancakes. Fruit and other "extras" will add to the evening meal.

The treasure hunt will be in charge of Scoutmaster John H. Keller assisted by the guardians, Miss Verna Schwartz, Miss Ivy Tawney, Miss Elia Gilliland, Miss Frances Fritchey, Miss Nellie Kelly, Miss Katharine Duncan, and Miss Amy Swope. These will also conduct the exercises of the Camp Fire.

The day will close by 8:30, and the march on Gettysburg will be made by 9:15 this evening.

INTER-FRAT DANCE

Fraternities Entertain Friends in Glatfelter Hall.

An inter-fraternity dance was held in Glatfelter Hall, college, on Friday evening when the following guests were present: Dr. and Mrs. H. R. Shepherd, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Smith, Mrs. H. B. Nixon, Mrs. William Hersh, Mrs. J. Donald Swope; Miss Frances Seabrook, Miss Carolyn Billingsly, Westminster; Miss Green, Huntingdon; Miss Fulton, Stewartstown; Miss Fannie Hoy, Harrisburg; Miss Rita Bowers, York; Miss Lela LeGore, LeGore, Md.; Miss Thelma Littlefield, Middleburg, Md.; Miss Rosalie Cole, Buchanan Valley; Miss Louise Wareheim, Miss Ruth Ambrose, Waynesboro; Miss Naomi Coblenz, Hood College; Miss Ruth Annan, Miss Anna Gilliland, Miss Eileen Power, Miss Katherine Duncan, Miss Sara Mumford, Miss Ruth Bream, Miss Florence Reinecke, Miss Mary Slaybaugh, Miss Lillian Kissinger, Miss Mary Kohler, Miss Zita Ramer, Miss Grace Ramer, Miss Dorothy Zane, Miss Isabel Daniels, Miss Viola Miller, Miss Lillian Crawford, Miss Virginia Tudor, and Miss Janet Robertson.

for leniency. The young man gave drunkenness as the reason for his crime. He was placed on parole for a period of two years. The costs were placed on the defendant.

Thomas and John Pasco, the two McSherrystown men who were convicted of assault and battery upon S. L. Johns, after his failure to pay them some wages they claimed, were next called. J. Donald Swope, Esq. presented a petition signed by 240 representative citizens of McSherrystown asking clemency on the ground that it was their first offense, that they were peaceful and law-abiding citizens and would not likely further offend.

The Court pointed out that physical violence was not the proper method to use in collecting a bill, and then placed each under two years parole on their good behavior toward all citizens "and especially toward S. L. Johns." The defendants were ordered to pay the costs and, when it was stated that they were poor, the Court suggested that some of the men who had petitioned for leniency might help to meet this part of the question.

The jury in the case of the administrators of the estate of H. J. Weiler against the Ohio Farmers Insurance Company brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $3089.43. Motion was at once made for a new trial, the reasons to be filed in four days.

GERMAN GUNS SHELL DUNKIRK

Nineteen Missiles Fall on City Killing Twenty Persons.

WERE FIRED BY ARTILLERY

May Indicate Advance of Germans
Hitherto Reported Twenty Miles Away—Paris Reported Attack From Sea.

London, May 1.—Official admission that the Germans have bombarded Dunkirk, on the English channel, are causing the wildest speculation in London.

The French war office issued the following:

"German warships have been reported at large off the coast of Belgium."

"Dunkirk received nineteen shells of large caliber. Twenty persons were killed and forty-five wounded. Some houses were destroyed."

When the excitement caused by this announcement was at its height the British war office issued a statement that it was not true that German warships had bombarded Dunkirk.

This was supplemented by an official statement, which increased the public bewilderment.

"The shelling of Dunkirk," says the latest British statement, "is now reported by aerial reconnaissance to have been from a land gun, and the reports that German warships were off that port were due to a misapprehension."

The admiralty later issued another statement:

"The position of the German guns bombarding Dunkirk has been verified by air reconnaissance, and it was attacked. Twelve small and two large bombs were dropped."

That the bombardment was from the land also seems to be indicated by a communication issued in Berlin which says that "the fortress at Dunkirk was shelled by German artillery," but if the Germans have shelled the port from the land side they have either put into use artillery of an effective range hitherto unheard of, or have driven forward five or ten miles at some point along their line in southwest Belgium or northwestern France. The Germans have not hitherto been reported nearer Dunkirk than Dixmude or Nieuport, both being twenty miles from the channel port.

The extreme range of land guns is so far in this war has been fifteen miles. The effective range is much less, not greater than ten miles.

There have been several dispatches in the last week reporting German warships were at large in the North sea, they apparently having evaded the British men of war, which for many months have been doing patrol duty in front of the German naval bases on the eastern side of the North sea.

ZEERBRUGGE HEAVILY SHELLED

ALLIES CAPTURE TURKISH TOWN

Gallipoli Falls and Warships Enter Dardanelles.

TURKS CONTRADICT LONDON

The Allies Report Progress on Both Sides of the Straits and in Naval Operations.

London, May 1.—Important successes, chief of which is the capture of the town of Gallipoli, are reported in the allies' land and sea operations at the Dardanelles.

Gallipoli, from which the peninsula takes its name, is at the western end of the Sea of Marmora, forty miles from the mouth of the straits.

On the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles the French are reported to have made thousands of prisoners. The fleet has advanced eight miles up the straits, reaching a position in front of the Chanak forts. The Turkish fort of Nagara was reported under heavy fire.

On the other hand, Turkey officially claims in a Constantinople dispatch that a large part of the allied troops have been driven from the peninsula and all the invaders from the Asiatic side. Damage to several warships and transports of the allies is also claimed.

The Athens correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph says that the real difficulties for the allied troops will only commence as they advance further into the interior, where the Turks have strong defenses and heavy guns. The correspondent says that the military authorities in Athens believe that the campaign will be a long one.

The following dispatch, received by the London Express from its Athens correspondent, reports concerning the peninsula campaign:

"I learn from Tenedos that the allies occupied the town of Gallipoli after heavy fighting. Allied forces disembarked at Enos, advanced nearly twenty miles and occupied several villages.

"Three British warships bombarded Turkish positions in the Gulf of Smyrna, and it is stated that allied troops also landed in the neighborhood of Smyrna.

"Five points on the line between Enos and Saros were selected by the allies for the disembarkation of the troops. Another force was landed on the Balaik line. A demonstration by a landing party on the plains of Troy led to the capture of 8000 prisoners. Turkish troops continue to arrive."

"It is reported from Mytilene," says the Exchange Telegraph company's Athens correspondent under date of Thursday, "that the French on the Asiatic side of the Dardanelles, where there have been sanguinary battles at various points, have captured 5000 Turks and continue their advance successfully."

According to the Daily Mail's Mytilene correspondent, the allies have occupied the town of Maitos, as well as Gallipoli.

Serious damage to the Turkish fortifications resulted from the bombardment by an allied fleet which was carried out simultaneously with the landing of troops in the Dardanelles on Monday, according to the Chronicle's correspondent.

department, afloat and ashore, to meet an urgent call.

For many years officers have written and talked about the formation of advance base material and the practice of exercising landing parties of seamen and marines in the use of this important adjunct to naval warfare. Congress appropriated money for this important plan of campaign, but never until January of last year was the navy thus exercised. Three months after extensive practice had been given for the first time in our navy the same fleet and the same men were called out to land at Vera Cruz, and it was transacted.

GETTING READY

Now Ready to Prepare Schedule for New League.

The formal admission of Hanover to the Blue Ridge League, the fixing of May 27 for the opening games, and the election of D. McG. Newcomer, of Hanover, as third vice president of the league featured the meeting of the directors from the various towns at Hagerstown Friday evening.

Various details were gone over, including the issuing of passes. It was decided to allow all ministers free admission to games, to allow passes to newspapers and officials, but otherwise to restrict greatly any such issues. The umpires' salaries were fixed at $100 a month but none chosen. The schedule committee will now get to work and it is expected that its announcement will be made in the near future.

Gettysburg rallied in the ninth with the score at 5 to 2, but were unable to tie up the score.

SYNOPSIS.

Christopher Bellew, a tenderfoot, starts for the Klondike in a gold rush and plucksly works at the back breaking toll of packing freight.

He meets a beautiful girl, Joy Gastell, deserts his own party, and he and Shorty, a new acquaintance, hire out to two wealthy prospectors. Joy has nicknamed him "Smoke."

Smoke and Shorty befriend a man named Brock and nearly perish in attempting to cross Lake Lebarge because of the uselessness of their employers.

Smoke and Shorty take command by force and get through to Dawson City, where they are discharged. On Brock's tip they stampede for Squaw creek.

They overtake Joy Gastell and her father. To help the Sea Lion crowd joy treacherously leads them away from Squaw creek.

Smoke saves the girl's feet from freezing. He and Shorty by mistake jump a miner's claim and lose it. Then Smoke finds Surprise lake, the bottom of which is covered with snow.

Smoke is shot at, witnesses the murder of a miner by the unknown marksman and is arrested for murder himself.

Brock shows a Surprise lake nugget, the impromptu court is stampeded, and Smoke's life is saved. Smoke wins money at roulette.

He continues to win, and the gamblers buy him off. His system was based on the discovery that the roulette wheel was warped.

Prompted by Joy Gastell, Smoke enters a race for a million dollar claim against some of the best dog mushers.

At a critical moment Joy supplies Smoke with a fresh dog team, and he runs a dead heat with Big Olaf for the claim.

Smoke goes to Surprise lake. He falls into a crevasse in a glacier, and a miner, Carson, makes heroic efforts to rescue him.

Smoke cuts a rope to save Carson, fails himself and is caught in a pocket below from which he is rescued by Carson and Joy.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Flutter in Eggs.

It was in the A. C. company's big store at Dawson that Lucille Arral beckoned Smoke Bellew over to the dry goods counter.

Smoke obeyed her call with alacrity. The man did not exist in Dawson who would not have been flattered by the notice of Lucille Arral, the singing soubrette of the tiny stock company that performed nightly at the Palace Opera House.

"Things are dead," she complained, with pretty petulance. "There hasn't been a stampede for a week. There's no dust in circulation. There's always standing room now at the opera house. And there hasn't been a mail from the outside for two whole weeks. In short, this burg has crawled into its cave and gone to sleep. We've got to do something. It needs breathing, and you and I can do it. I've broken with Wild Water, you know."

Smoke caught two almost simultaneous visions. One was of Joy Gastell, the other was of himself, in the midst of a bleak snow stretch under a cold arctic moon, being pot shoted with accuracy and dispatch by the aforesaid Wild Water. Smoke's reluctance at raising excitement with the aid of Lucille Arral was too patent for her to miss.

"I'm not thinking what you are thinking at all, thank you," she chided, with a laugh and a pout. "Take it from me, Mr. Smoke Bellew, I'm not going to make love to you, and if you dare to make love to me Wild Water will take care of your case. You know him. Besides, I-I haven't really broken with him. Wild Water thinks I've broken with him, don't you see?"

"Well, have you, or haven't you?"

"I haven't there! But it's between you and me in confidence."

"Where do I come in, stalking horse or fall guy?"

"Neither. You make a pot of money, we put across the laugh on Wild Water and cheer Dawson up, and, best of all and the reason for it all, he gets disciplined. He needs it. He's--well the best way to put it is he's too turbulent. He broke out last night again, sowed the noor of the M. & M. with gold dust--all of a thousand dollars. You've heard of it, of course."

"Yes; this morning. But still I don't get you."

"Listen. He was too turbulent. I broke our engagement, and he's going around making a noise like a broken heart. Now we come to it. I like eggs."

"But what have eggs and appetite got to do with it?" Smoke demanded.

"Everything. I like eggs. There's only a limited supply of eggs in Dawson."

"Sure, Slavovitch's restaurant has most of them. Ham and one egg, $3; ham and two eggs, $5. That means $2 an egg, retail."

"He likes eggs too," she continued. "But that's not the point. I like them. I have breakfast every morning at 11 o'clock at Slavovitch's. I invariably eat two eggs." She paused impressively. "Suppose, just suppose, somebody corners eggs."

She waited, and Smoke regarded her with admiring eyes, while in his heart he backed with approval Wild Water's choice of her.

"You're not following," she said.

"Go on," he replied. "I give up. What's the answer?"

"Stupid! You know Wild Water. When he sees I'm languishing for twenty-eight eggs in that there pair settin' on the table, an' they cost, every dinged last one of em, just exactly seven great big round iron dollars a throw. If you stand in cryin' need of any further items of information I'm willin' and free to impart."

"Go on," Smoke requested.

"Well, that geezer you was dickerin' with is a big buck Indian. Am I right? He's a dog trader--right, eh? His name is Scar Face Jim. That's so ain't it? D're get my drift?"

"You mean we've been bidding?"

"Against each other? Sure. That squaw's his wife, an' they keep house on the hill back of the hospital. I could 'a' got them eggs for two a throw if you hadn't butted in."

"And so could I," Smoke laughed. "I'd kept out. But it doesn't amount to anything. We know that we've go the corner. That's the big thing."

Shorty spent the next hour wresting with a stud of a pencil on the margin of a three-year-old newspaper:

"There she stands," he said at last. "Lemme give you the totals. You an' me has right now in our possession exactly 973 eggs. They costs us exactly $2,700. If we stick up Wild Water for $10 an egg we stand to win, clean net an' all to the good, just exactly $6,70."

At 11 that night Smoke was routed from sound sleep by Shorty.

"I just seen Slavovitch. He says to me: 'Shorty, I want to speak to you about them eggs. I've kept it quiet. Nobody knows I sold 'em to you. But if you're speculatin' I can put you wise to a good thing.' An' he did, too. Smoke,

"Well, maybe it sounds uncredible, but that good thing was Wild Water Charley. He's lookin' to buy eggs. He goes around to Slavovitch an' offers him $5 an egg, an' before he quits he's offerin' $8. An' Slavovitch ain't got no eggs. Last thing Wild Water says to Slavovitch is that he'll beat the head off him if he ever finds out Slavovitch has eggs cached away somewhere. Slavovitch had to tell 'em he'd sold the eggs, but that the buyer was smoke up for him."

But Wild Water laid a restraining hand on the eager Shorty as he explained. "I don't mean cooked. I want them with the shells on."

"So that you can carry 'em away?"

"That's the idea."

"But that ain't hospitality," Shorty objected. "It's--it's tradin'."

Smoke nodded concurrence. "That's different, Wild Water. I thought you just wanted to eat them. You see, we went into this for a speculation."

The dangerous blue of Wild Water's eyes began to grow more dangerous. "I'll pay you for them," he said sharply. "How much?"

"Oh, not a dozen," Smoke replied. "We couldn't sell a dozen. We're not retailers; we're speculators. We can't break our own market. We've got a hard and fast corner, and when we sell out it's the whole corner or nothing."

"You certainly are, Shorty. First thing in the morning tip off Slavovitch. Have him tell Wild Water that you and I are partners in the deal."

In the morning Smoke chanced upon Lucille Arral again at the dry goods counter of the A. C. store.

"It's working!" he jubilated. "It's working!" Wild Water's been around to Slavovitch, trying to buy or bully eggs out of him. And by this time Slavovitch has told him that Shorty and I own the corner."

Lucille Arral's eyes sparkled with delight. "I'm going to breakfast right now," she cried. "And I'll ask the waiter for eggs and be so plaintive when there aren't any as to melt a heart of stone. And you know Wild Water's heart is anything but stone. He'll buy the corner if it costs him a fortune. Hold out for a stiff figure. Nothing less than $10 will satisfy me, and if you sell for anything less, Smoke, I'll never forgive you."

That noon, up in their cabin, Shorty placed on the table a pot of beans, a pot of coffee, a smoking platter of moose meat and bacon, a plate of stewed dried peaches and called "Grub's ready!"

Smoke opened the door for a breath of frosty air and saw something that made him close the door hurriedly and dash to the stove. The frying pan, still hot from the moose meat and bacon, he put back on the front lid. Into the frying pan he put a generous dab of butter, then reached for an egg, which he broke and dropped spluttering into the pan. As he reached for a second egg Shorty gained his side and clutched his arm in an excited grip.

"Hey, what you doin'?" he demanded.

"Frying eggs," Smoke informed him, breaking the second one and throwing off Shorty's detaining hand. "Get out

"Do you want 'em ninety-six hundred an' twenty dollars' worth?" Shorty queried.

"Aw, listen to reason," Wild Water pleaded. "I only want a couple of dozen. I'll give you $20 apiece for 'em. What do I want with all the rest of them eggs?"

"I should say Miss Arral's worth the price of the eggs," Smoke put in quietly.

"Worth it?" Wild Water stood up in the heat of his eloquence. "She's worth a million dollars. She's worth all the dust in Klondike. But that ain't no call for me to gamble $10,000 on a breakfast for her. Now, I've got a proposition. Lend me a couple of dozen of them eggs. I'll turn 'em over to Slavovitch. He'll feed 'em to her with my compliments. She ain't smiled to me for a hundred years. If them eggs get a smile for me I'll take the whole boiling off your hands."

"Will you sign a contract to that effect?" Smoke said quickly, for he knew that Lucille Arral had agreed to smile.

Wild Water gasped. "You're almighty swift with business up here on the hill," he said, with a hint of a snarl.

"We're only accepting your own proposition," Smoke answered.

"All right; bring on the paper: make it hard and fast," Wild Water cried in the anger of surrender.

Because It Had No Hard Usage.

A couple were discussing a certain cheap store, he in defense and she the negative. "Say, look at this pocketbook. I bought it for a dime almost a year ago. Not worn a bit," he said.

"Well, that's because you don't take it out of your pocket enough," she said, and the argument was closed.

ing to the hill, and he'll be here to five minutes."

Shorty sat down at the table. By the time the expected knock came at the door Smoke was facing him across the table, and before each was a place containing three hot fried eggs.

"Come in!" Smoke called.

Wild Water Charley, a strapping young giant, entered and shook hands.

"Set down an' have a bite, Wild Water," Shorty invited. "Smoke, fry him some eggs. I'll bet he ain't scared a egg in a coon's age."

Smoke broke three more eggs into the hot pan and in several minutes placed them before his guest, who looked at them with strange and strained expression that Shorty confessed afterward his fear that Wild Water would slip them into his pocket and carry them away.

"Say, them swells down in the states ain't got nothin' over us in the matter of eats," Shorty gloated. "Here's you an' me an' Smoke gettin' outside $90 worth of eggs an' not battin' an eye."

DUELL ORDERED FROM COURT

Applauded Testimony at Big Libel Trial.

BAD DAY FOR BARNES

Witnesses Tell of His Control of Legislature and Boast of Being Able to Vote Riff-Raff of Democrats.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 1.—Charles H. Duell, confidential letter bearer between Charles S. Whitman and Theodore Roosevelt, was ordered out of the court room by Justice Andrews during the trial of the Barnes-Roosevelt libel suit.

Mr. Duell had been following ex-Senator Davenport's lively characterization of Mr. Barnes' gleeful attitude at the seance door on the night of June 30, 1919, the night the Cobb direct primaries bill was being put through the senate by the Republicans and Democratic machines.

"He was a political Nero," said Mr. Davenport. "He fiddled outside the chamber while Rome burned."

A handclap, distinct as the report of a pistol, seeming indeed much louder than a pistol shot in the same circumstance, startled the justice and caused him to swing to his left, the direction from which the smack had sounded.

The person who applauded, who made that disturbance will leave the court room instantly," said Justice Andrews. "I will not tolerate such a breach of decorum."

Mr. Duell arose with a face all peony red, hugged the wall and flitted from sight.

L. W. France, of Brooklyn, said that Barnes' reasons for opposing direct primary legislation was that he believed such elections would give too much publicity to candidates for office. Mr. France said that Mr. Barnes had told him that the reputation of any man could be ruined by turning the limelight upon him, and that he could vote the riff-raff of the Democrats in Albany in the Republican primaries, and so disgust the people that they would demand a repeal of the bill.

Mr. Davenport's testimony, all showing Mr. Barnes' domination of the senate by means of a combination with Tammany Democrats, was not the only effective point scored by Colonel Roosevelt in his effort to justify his charge that Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy were links between crooked politics and crooked business.

In addition to Senator Davenport, Colonel Roosevelt's counsel called to the stand Harvey D. Hinman and Josiah T. Newcomb for the purpose of displaying corroboration of his own testimony about Barnes' nations of the right of the people to rule and Barnes' grip on legislative machinery.

Both Mr. Hinman and Mr. Newcomb senators at the time improper acts on Barnes' part are alleged, backed up the colonel, squarely testified that the popular measure, the Hinman-Green bill, was choked to death by Barnes and Grady because it meant the end of organization rule, and that the weaker, harmless measure which Governor Hughes vetoed, the Cobb bill, was driven through the legislature by a bipartisan combination.

SEVERE STORM IN YORK CO.

Tramp in Barn Struck by Lightning Saves Live Stock.

York, Pa., May 1.—Damage estimated at more than $10,000 was caused to property during a heavy storm that swept York county.

Barns owned by Isaac Gable, Dallastown, and Ella Neff, Red Lion, were struck by lightning and burned.

A tramp sleeping in the Gable barn was awakened by the lightning bolt and saved the live stock.

The Hallam hotel was struck by lightning and a horse was killed in a barn at Lewisberry.

Trees were uprooted by the heavy wind and there was much damage to crops by fields being washed out by the downpour of rain.

At Spring Grove a cloudburst was reported and many cellars were flooded from the heavy rains.

Mayor Puts Ban on Liquor.

Franklin, Pa., May 1—City employees who spend their money for liquor will be dropped from the pay roll as a result of a warning by Mayor F. W. Brown. The edict against use of rum applies to all departments of the city administration. "We do not intend that the money paid out by the city shall be spent for liquor when so many persons have a hard time to earn enough to obtain bread," says the mayor, "and off will come the head of any employee who pursues this course."

SYNOPSIS.

Christopher Bellew, a tenderfoot, starts for the Klondike in a gold rush and plucks his way to the back breaking toll of packing freight.

He meets a beautiful girl, Joy Gastell, deserts his own party, and he and Shorty, a new acquaintance, hire out to two wealthy prospectors. Joy has nicknamed him "Smoke."

Smoke and Shorty befriend a man named Breck and nearly perish in attempting to cross Lake Lebarge because of the uselessness of their employers.

Smoke and Shorty take command by force and get through to Dawson City, where they are discharged. On Breck's tip they stampede for Squaw creek.

The overtake Joy Gastell and her father. To help the Sea Lion crowd Joy treacherously leads them away from Squaw creek.

Smoke saves the girl's feet from freezing. He and Shorty by mistake jump a miner's claim and lose it. Then Smoke finds Surprise lake, the bottom of which is covered with snow.

Smoke is shot at, witnesses the murder of a miner by the unknown marksman and is arrested for murder himself.

Breck shows a Surprise lake nugget, the unprompted court is stampeded, and Smoke's life is saved. Smoke wins money at roulette.

He continues to win, and the gamblers buy him off. His system was based on the discovery that the roulette wheel was warped.

Prompted by Joy Gastell, Smoke enters a race for a million dollar claim against some of the best dog mushers.

At a critical moment Joy supplies Smoke with a fresh dog team, and he runs a dead heat with Big Olaf for the claim.

Smoke goes to Surprise lake. He falls into a crevasse in a glacier, and a miner, Carson, makes heroic efforts to rescue him.

Smoke cuts a rope to save Carson, falls himself and is caught in a pocket below, from which he is rescued by Carson and Joy.

CHAPTER XIX.

A Flutter in Eggs.

IT was in the A. C. company's big store at Dawson that Lucille Arral beckoned Smoke Bellew over to the dry goods counter.

Smoke obeyed her call with alacrity. The man did not exist in Dawson who would not have been flattered by the notice of Lucille Arral, the singing soubrette of the tiny stock company that performed nightly at the Palace Opera House.

"Things are dead," she complained, with pretty petulance. "There hasn't been a stampede for a week. There's no dust in circulation. There's always standing room now at the opera house. And there hasn't been a mail from the outside for two whole weeks. In short, this burg has crawled into its cave and gone to sleep. We've got to do something. It needs evening, and you and I can do it. I've broken with Wild Water, you know."

Smoke caught two almost simultaneous visions. One was of Joy Gastell, the other was of himself, in the midst of a bleak snow stretch under a cold arctic moon, being pot-shotted with accuracy and dispatch by the aforesaid Wild Water. Smoke's reluctance to raising excitement with the aid of Lucille Arral was too patent for her to miss.

"I'm not thinking what you are thinking at all, thank you," she chided, with a laugh and a pout. "Take it from me, Mr. Smoke Bellew, I'm not going to make love to you, and if you dare to make love to me Wild Water will take care of your case. You know him. Besides, I--I haven't really broken with him. Wild Water thinks I've broken with him, don't you see?"

"Well, have you, or haven't you?"

"I haven't--there! But it's between you and me in confidence."

"Where do I come in, stalking horse or fall guy?"

"Neither. You make a pot of money, we put across the laugh on Wild Water and cheer Dawson up, and best of all and the reason for it all, he gets disciplined. He needs it. He's--well, the best way to put it is he's too turbulent. He broke out last night again. Sowed the floor of the M. & M. with gold dust--all of a thousand dollars. You've heard of it, of course."

"Yes; this morning. But still I don't get you."

"Listen. He was too turbulent. I broke our engagement, and he's going around making a noise like a broken heart. Now we come to it. I like eggs."

"But what have eggs and appetite got to do with it?" Smoke demanded.

"Everything. I like eggs. There's only a limited supply of eggs in Dawson."

"Sure, Slavovitch's restaurant has most of them. Ham and one egg, $3; ham and two eggs, $5. That means $2 an egg retail."

"He likes eggs too," she continued. "But that's not the point. I like them. I have breakfast every morning at 11 o'clock at Slavovitch's. I invariably eat two eggs." She paused impressively. "Suppose, just suppose, somebody comes?"

She waited, and Smoke regarded her with admiring eyes, while in his heart he backed with approval Wild Water's choice of her.

"You're not following," she said.

"Go on," he replied. "I give up what's the answer?"

"Stupid! You know Wild Water. When he sees I'm languishing for twentysix eggs in that there pan settin' on the table, an' they cost, every dinged last one of em, just exactly seven great big round iron dollars a throw. If you stand in cryin' need of any further items of information I'm willin' and free to impart."

"Go on," Smoke requested.

"Well, that geezer you was dickerin' with is a big buck Indian. Am I right?"

Smoke nodded and continued to nod to each question.

"He's got one cheek half gone, where a bald face grizzly swatted him. Am I right? He's a dog trader--right, eh? His name is Scar Face Jim. That's so ain't it? D're get my drift?"

"You mean we've been bidding?"

"Against each other? Sure thing. That squaw's his wife, an' they keep house on the hill back of the hospital. I could 'a' got them eggs for two a throw if you hadn't butted in."

"And so could I!" Smoke laughed. "I'd kept out. But it doesn't amount to anything. We know that we've got the corner. That's the big thing."

Shorty spent the next hour wrestling with a stub of a pencil on the margin of a three-year old newspaper.

"There she stands," he said at last. "Lemme give you the totals. You amme has right now in our possession exactly 873 eggs. They costs us exactly $2,700. If we stick up Wild Water for $10 an egg we stand to win, clean net an' all to the good, just exactly $8,700."

At 11 that night Smoke was routed from sound sleep by Shorty.

"I just seen Slavovitch. He says to me: 'Shorty, I want to speak to you about them eggs. I've kept it quiet. Nobody knows I sold 'em to you. But if you're speculatin' I can put you wise to a good thing.' An' he did, too. Smoke.

"Well, maybe it sounds uncredible, but that good thing was Wild Water Charley. He's lookin' to buy eggs. He goes around to Slavovitch an' offers him $5 an egg, an' before he quits he's offerin' $8. An' Slavovitch ain't got no eggs. Last thing Wild Water says to Slavovitch is that he'll beat the hell offen him if he ever finds out Slavovitch has eggs cached away some wheres. Slavovitch had to tell 'em he didn't the eggs, but that the buyer was secret.

"Slavovitch says to le' him say he word to Wild Water, who's got the eggs. 'Shorty,' he says to me, 'Wild Water'll come a-runnin'. You can hold him up for $8. Eight dollars your grandmother,' I says. 'He'll fall for $10 before I'm done with him.' Anyway, I told Slavovitch I'd think it over and let him know in the mornin'. Of course, we'll let 'em pass the word on to Wild Water. Am I right?"

You certainly are, Shorty. First thing in the morning tip off Slavovitch. Give him tell Wild Water that you and I are partners in the deal."

"Hey, Shorty!" Smoke called across the main street to his partner and crossed over. "I want you to do me a favor."

"Sure," Shorty said gallantly. "Wha is it? Let her rip."

"I want you to buy eggs for me."

"Sure, an' Florida water an' talcum powder, if you say the word. Look here, Smoke, if you want to go in for high drivin' you go an' buy your own eggs."

"I am going to buy, but I want you to help me to buy. You go right straight to Slavovitch's. Pay as high as $3, but buy all he's got."

"Three dollars!" Shorty ground. "An' I heard tell only yesterday that he's got all of 700 in stock! Twenty one hundred dollars for hen fruit. Say, Smoke, I'd sure do anything for you if you had a cold in the head an' was layin' with both arms broke I'd set by your bedside day an' night an' wipe your nose for you, but I'll be everlastingly d--d if I'll squander twenty-one hundred good iron dollars on hen fruit for you or any other two legged man."

"They're not your dollars, but mine. Shorty. It's a deal I have on. What I'm after is to corner every blessed egg in Dawson, in the Klondike, on the Yukon. You've got to help me out. I haven't the time to tell you of the in wardness of the deal. I will after ward and let you go half on it if you want to. But the thing right now is to get the eggs. Now, you hustle up to Slavovitch's and buy all he's got. And then keep on. Nose out every egg in Dawson and buy it. Understand? Buy it!"

Never was a market cornered more quickly. In three days every known egg in Dawson with the exception of several dozen was in the hands of Smoke and Shorty.

The several dozen not yet gathered in were in the hands of two persons One, with whom Shorty was dealing was an Indian woman who lived in a cabin on the hill back of the hospital.

"I'll get her today," Shorty announced next morning. "I'll be back in a jiffy, if I don't bust myself a-shovin' dust at her."

In the afternoon when Smoke returned to the cabin he found Shorty.

"What luck?" Shorty asked carelessly after several minutes had passed.

"Nothing doing," Smoke answered. "How did you get on with the squaw?"

Shorty cocked his head triumphant ly toward a tin pan of eggs on the table. "Seven dollars a clatter, though," he confessed.

"I offered $10 finally," Smoke said, "and then the fellow told me he'd already sold his eggs. Now that looks bad, Shorty. Somebody else is in the market. Those twenty-eight eggs are liable to cause us trouble. You see, the success of the corner consists in holding every last."

He broke off to stare at his partner. A pronounced change was coming over Shorty--one of agitation masked by extreme deliberation. "Do you mind kindly just repeatin' over how many eggs you said the man didn't sell to you?" he asked.

"Twenty-eight."

"Hum!" Shorty communed to himself. "They's just exactly, precisely nor nothin' more or anything less'n up the hill, and he'll be here to five minutes."

Shorty sat down at the table. By the time the expected knock came at the door Smoke was facing him across the table, and before each was a plate containing three hot fried eggs.

"Come in!" Smoke called.

Wild Water Charley, a strapping young giant, entered and shook hands.

"Set down an' have a bite, Wild Water." Shorty invited. "Smoke, fry him some eggs. I'll bet he ain't scoffed a egg in a coon's age."

Smoke broke three more eggs into the hot pan and in several minutes placed them before his guest, who looked at them with so strange and strained an expression that Shorty confessed afterward his fear that Wild Water would slip them into his pocket and carry them away.

"Say, them swells down in the states ain't got nothin' over us in the matter of eats," Shorty gloated. "Here's you an' me an' Smoke gettin' outside $90 worth of eggs an' not battin' an eye."

Wild Water stared at the rapidly disappearing eggs and seemed petrified.

"They--they ain't worth no $10," Wild Water said slowly.

THE AUTO-OILED WINDMILL WITH DUPLICATE GEARS RUNNING IN OIL

Every bearing is constantly flooded with oil. Two quarts of oil in the gear case of this 8-foot auto-oiled windmill will keep the gears and every bearing flooded with oil for a year or more.

The galvanized steel helmet covers the gears, keeps out rain, keeps out dust, keeps in oil. The mill needs oiling but once a year.

DUELL ORDERED FROM COURT

Applauded Testimony at Big Libel Trial.

BAD DAY FOR BARNES

Witnesses Tell of His Control of Legislature and boast of Being Able to Vote Riff-Raff of Democrats.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 1.—Charles H. Duell, confidential letter bearer between Charles S. Whitman and Theodore Roosevelt, was ordered out of the court room by Justice Andrews during the trial of the Barnes-Roosevelt libel suit.

Mr. Duell had been following ex-Senator Davenport's lively characterization of Mr. Barnes' gleeful attitude at the seante door on the night of June 30, 1919, the night the Cobb direct primaries bill was being put through the senate by the Republican and Democratic machines.

"He was a political Nero," said Mr. Davenport. "He fiddled outside the chamber while Rome burned."

A handclap, distinct as the report of a pistol, seeming indeed much louder than a pistol shot in the same circumstance, startled the justice and caused him to swing to his left, the direction from which the smack had sounded.

The person who applauded, who made that disturbance will leave the court room instantly," said Justice Andrews. "I will not tolerate such a breach of decorum."

Mr. Duell arose with a face all peony red, hugged the wall and flitted from sight.

L. W. France, of Brooklyn, said that Barnes' reasons for opposing direct primary legislation was that he believed such elections would give too much publicity to candidates for office. Mr. France said that Mr. Barnes had told him that the reputation of any man could be ruined by turning the limelight upon him, and that he could vote the riff-raff of the Democrats in Albany in the Republican primaries, and so disgust the people that they would demand a repeal of the bill.

Mr. Davenport's testimony, all showing Mr. Barnes' domination of the senate by means of a combination with Tammany Democrats, was not the only effective point scored by Colonel Roosevelt in his effort to justify his charge that Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy were links between crooked politics and crooked business.

In addition to Senator Davenport, Colonel Roosevelt's counsel called to the stand Harvey D. Hinman and Josiah T. Newcomb for the purpose of displaying corroboration of his own testimony about Barnes' nations of the right of the people to rule and Barnes' grip on legislative machinery.

Both Mr. Hinman and Mr. Newcomb senators at the time improper acts on Barnes' part are alleged, backed up the colonel, squarely testified that the primary measure, the Hinman-Green bill, was choked to death by Barnes and Grady because it meant the end of organization rule, and that the weaker, harmless measure which Governor Hughes vetoed, the Cobb bill, was driven through the legislature by a bipartisan combination.

SEVERE STORM IN YORK CO.

Tramp in Barn Struck by Lightning Saves Live Stock.

York, Pa., May 1.—Damage estimated at more than $10,000 was caused to property during a heavy storm that swept York county.

Barns owned by Isaac Gable, Dallastown, and Ella Neff, Red Lion, were struck by lightning and burned.

A tramp sleeping in the Gable barn was awakened by the lightning bolt and saved the live stock.

The Hallam hotel was struck by lightning and a horse was killed in a barn at Lewisberry.

Trees were uprooted by the heavy wind and there was much damage to crops by fields being washed out by the downpour of rain.

At Spring Grove a cloudburst was reported and many celars were flooded from the heavy rains.

Mayor Puts Ban on Liquor.

Franklin, Pa., May 1—City employees who spend their money for liquor will be dropped from the pay roll as a result of a warning by Mayor F. W. Brown. The edict against use of rum applies to all departments of the city administration. "We do not intend that the money paid out by the city shall be spent for liquor when so many persons have a hard time to earn enough to obtain bread," says the mayor, "and off will come the head of any city employee who pursues this course."

Deny Grand Duke Nicholas Is Ill.

Washington, May 1.—The Russian ambassador received the following from the minister of foreign affairs in Petrograd: "Please contradict, most categorically, the false reports spread by the German press, according to which the Grand Duke Nicholas was said to be ill. The grand duke, commander in chief, is in perfect health, and has been accompanying his majesty, the emperor, in his recent visit to Galicia."

Mayor Puts Ban on Liquor.

Franklin, Pa., May 1—City employees who spend their money for liquor will be dropped from the pay roll as a result of a warning by Mayor F. W. Brown. The edict against use of rum applies to all departments of the city administration. "We do not intend that the money paid out by the city shall be spent for liquor when so many persons have a hard time to earn enough to obtain bread," says the mayor, "and off will come the head of any city employee who pursues this course."

Deny Grand Duke Nicholas Is Ill.

REMARKABLE RESULTS OF THE NEW TISSUE BUILDER TONOLINE TABLETS IN MANY CASES OF RUN DOWN MEN AND WOMEN.

PROVE IT YOURSELF BY BUYING a box of Tonoline Tablets NOW.

"By George, I never saw anything like the effects of that new treatment, Tonoline Tablets, for building up of weight and lost nerve force. It acted more like a miracle than a medicine," said a well-known gentleman yesterday in speaking of the revolution that had taken place in his condition. "I began to think that there was nothing on earth that could make me fat. I tried tonics, digestives, heavy eating diets, milk, beer and almost everything else you could think of.

Any man or woman who is thin can recover normal weight by the best new treatment Tonoline Tablets.

"I have been thin for years and began to think it was natural for me to be that way. Finally I read about the remarkable processes brought about by use of Tonoline Tablets so I decided to try myself. Well, when I look at myself in the mirror now, I think it is somebody else. I have put on just forty pounds during the last forty days, and never felt stronger. Tonoline Tablets are a powerful inducer to nutrition, increases cell growth, food, increases the number of blood corpuscles and as a necessary result builds up muscles, and rounds out the figure.

For women who can never appear stylish in anything they wear because of their thinness this remarkable treatment may prove a revelation. ### The Job Uncle Ben Did

By SADIE OL'COTT

"Uncle," asked a little white child of a septuagenarian negro in Alabama, "were you in the war between the states?"

"Yes, honey, I war in de wah. Leastways I war dar."

"Did you kill anybody, uncle?"

"No, I didn't kill nobody, but I saved somebody's life."

"How was that? Tell me about it."

"Well, honey, when de wah broke out all de niggers on de ole plantation"—

"Why do you say 'the old plantation'?"

"Case de plantations now ain't what dey was den. Now dey all cut up, some of 'em owned by de niggers. Den dey wuh big and lots o' niggers on 'em. As I wuh a-sayin', honey, most all de niggers wo'kin' on de ole plantation dug out 'cept me. My marrs, yo' great-grandpop, wuh mighty kind to me, and I wasn't a field hand. I did jobs about de house. I wuh a carpenter and could make anything dat wuh needed on de premises."

"Yo' great-grandpop went off to de wah, and yo' grandpop went off to de wah. De Yankees cum down hyer and took possession. De ole plantation didn't look like it did no mo' after de Yanks cum. Dey used up de fences fo' firewood and run off all de stock."

"Yo' grandpop wuh gwine to marry yo' grandma 'bout dat time. Yo' grandpop when he went to de wah left Missy Lucy what he war gwine to marry with his mudder. One day when de Yanks war hyer yo' grandpop Marse Edward, cum through de lines fo' to visit Missy Lucy. He wuh dressed in common folks' clothes, case he had no business, bein' an ossifer in de south's army, to be in among de Yanks. While he wuh visitin' his mudder and his sweetheart one o' de ole plantation hands cum in and said dat some body tolle de Yanks dat he war dah. Dey wuh comin' some time in de night to take him."

"Marse Edward wuh catched like a possum in de trap. He dassent light out, fo' de Yanks had cum dat day and camped all about, and he dassent stay where he wuh. Yo' grandma sent fo' me and she says, says she:

"Ben, Marse Edward come hyer to see me. Ef de Yanks catch him hyer, hang him fo' a spr. Can't yo' make sompin' what he kin hide in dat day? won't suspect?"

"I scratched my head and done a lot o' thinkin'. Den I said, 'I don't know missy, wot I kin do unless I make a double bottom to de wood box, wha kin crawl in.'

"De berry t'ing," said missy, and went to wot's right off. De wood box went in de kitchen and wuh a great big un. I cut up some boads and put in bottom high 'ough fo' a man to lay down under, leavin' plenty o' crack fo' breathin'. I hadn't mo'n got it done when Miss Lucy seen de Yanks sur roundin' de house. Marse Edward got in under de wood, and dere wuh a loud rap at de do'. Missy tol' me to go to de do', and I went.

"Who dah? I axed.

"Open de do' right off," said a man.

I opened de do', and without askin' leave dey scattered all ober de house, lookin' fo' yo' grandpa. Marse Edward

Dey searched from de garret to de cellar, lookin' into de closets and under de beds and in de cubbord in de dinin' room. When dey cum to de kitchen I wuh dar, and I had a lot hand cornet ob my right eye lookin' right at 'em. De rest ob my eyes was on de wood box. Diah wuh cookin' de supper on de stove. Seein' an ossifer lookin' at de wood box, I went to de stove, pulled open de do', and says to Diah:

"Wha' fo' you let dis fire go out?

And I goes to de wood box and throws up de lid, and I tak' out an armful o' wood and puts it in de stove.

"Ef dat ossifer had any idee dat any body war hidin' in dat wood box I put it out ob his head right off. De ossifer kep' right on a-huntin', gwine down cellar. After huntin' all ober de house he comes up to me and he say:

"Yo' niggers know yo' own folks, don't yo'?"

"Reckon," I says, with a wink in de left hand corner ob my right eye.

"Den tell me whar de spy is hidin'."

"I put my mouf down close to he year, and I says softly:

"Look in de smokehouse."

"With dat he draved off he men from de house, and I reckon he went out to de smokehouse, fo' I didn't hear nothin' mo' from him.

"When de Yanks had gone away we uns had a con'vination how Marse Edward gwine to git out o' de trap. De way he done it war to rub he face with soot, and Missy Lucy she kinked he hair with her curlin' tongs, and he put on darky clothes, and he jist walked through de Yankees as ef he war as much a Yankee as any ob 'em. Next day he rode into de Yankee lines under a white flag with some south'n prison ers.

"Who d'ya' s'pose war de fust Yankee he met?"

"I don't know, uncle; tell me."

"De ossifer wot wuh huntin' fo' him de day befo'". Marse Edward had saw him through a crack and known him right off. Marse Edward larfed and tolle him 'bout it all, but said he wasn't a spy; he only cum to see his ma and Missy Lucy.

"No, honey, I didn't kill nobody durin' de wah, but I did a mighty good job 'abbin' yo' grandpop's life. Ef I didn't do dat yo' wouldn't been hyer nohow."
